Paul Auster is a master of words. This is a memoir that I read with pleasure, the pleasure caused by everything that is well crafted. The longest sentence in this book has 352 words (yes, I counted them), and it almost sounds like music, like a song you don't want to end. Not all of Paul Auster's works have this virtue, but this one does.

In his quietly transfixing new memoir, Winter Journal, Paul Auster meditates on what it means for his mind, body, and creativity to experience the unforgiving passage of time. This should be--and is--an intensely personal chronicle, but Auster makes the journey equally ours by inviting us into its unfolding.
